Conscious Relationships

LECTURE: FRIDAY, APRIL 10, 2015

7PM-9PM (REGISTRATION BEGINS AT 6:30PM)

We do not find the meaning of life by ourselves alone—we find it with another. Thomas Merton

Reaching our fullest potential always requires some form of relationship: family, friends, intimate partners, colleagues, a trusted advisor or mentor.

We will consider the changing nature of relationships, the necessity of conflict, and how differences of the “other” can lead to growth and grace. We will also explore the difference between dysfunctional/unconscious relationships vs. functional relationships vs. transformative ones.

2 CEUs for psychologists, counselors and social workers (see registration form)

Jerry M. Ruhl, PhD, is a clinical psychologist living in Houston, Texas. He is executive director of The Jung Center of Houston and has served as a faculty member of the Saybrook University Graduate Studies Program in Jungian Studies. He coauthored three books with Robert A. Johnson, including Contentment: A Way to True Happiness, published by HarperCollins. Dr. Ruhl sees patients in private practice, facilitates dream groups, and presents seminars around the nation. His website is jerryruhl.com.

Individuation, Impermanence, Imperfection

WORKSHOP: SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 2015

9AM-1:15PM (REGISTRATION BEGINS AT 8:30AM)

REFRESHMENTS PROVIDED

- How do you know when you are on the right path?
- Why do big ideas about achievement and enlightenment just get in the way?
- When can you trust your inner guide and when must you apply discipline and ethics to curb instinctual urgings?

We will consider these questions and how we can embrace irregularity, simplicity, and the integrity of natural objects and processes. This workshop integrates the Japanese aesthetic of wabi-sabi with the Jungian journey of individuation.

By cultivating appreciation for what is impermanent, imperfect, and unfinished in life, we can withdraw our projections and establish an authentic, differentiated self capable of relating to other imperfect beings. We will explore these compelling ideas through lecture, discussion, and practical exercises.

4 CEUs for psychologists, counselors and social workers (see registration form)

Wabi-sabi centers on the acceptance of transience and imperfection. Characteristics of wabi-sabi include asymmetry, asperity (roughness or irregularity), simplicity, economy, austerity, modesty, intimacy, and appreciation of the ingenuous integrity of natural objects and processes.

Individuation is Carl Jung's term for finding meaning and purpose in life. This wearisome but indispensable process requires coming to terms with the unconscious components of personality, including ever-present primordial instincts. Those who believe their ego is the whole of the psyche project their soul parts into the surrounding world, for everything unconscious is first experienced in projection. Through collisions, disappointments, and illness, we learn we have a shadow.
